Permits and Fees
- Most junior units are approved over the counter with just a building permit.
- Junior units are not separate dwelling units and don’t require building or fire code upgrades or separate utility connections.
- Junior units don’t pay impact fees, such as traffic and school fees.
- Junior units must be connected to a septic system or the sewer.

Use
- Junior units may be rented separately.
- Junior units may not be rented on a transient occupancy basis (less than 30 days), so they cannot be used as vacation rentals.
- The owner must live in the house or junior unit. This does not apply if the house is owned by a public agency, land trust, or non-profit housing organization.
